Seito Wood Table.

Design: Wolfgang C. R. Mezger.

A unique table sculpture made of solid wood: a playful sense of lightness emerges through a balance of lines, angles and surfaces. The oval table top and the crossed base can be made from the finest woods, such as oak or nutwood. The wooden table comes in a boat shape and as a round dining table – each in different sizes.

Warmth and sensuality

The choice of solid wood brings a feeling of coziness and natural elegance into every room. Crafted with soft, rounded edges, the design of table invites you to reach out and gently run your hand across its surface. The touch of the design leaves a lasting impression that you want to hold on to.

High value and lightness

A large dining table as meeting point and center of a house. Material and form in perfect harmony – everyone sitting at the table feels its power. Plenty of space here for all the family and guests.

The proportions of the top and legs have been perfectly balanced for each table size. The size of the base adapts to the format.

As an optional extra with a round table top: the lazy Susan makes food accessible to everyone at the table. Floating visually on the surface, it gives the furniture additional generosity.

Dining in good company The Seito family of dining tables, with surfaces made of natural wood or solid quartz, fits seamlessly into private and public spaces alike. Freestanding in a living or dining room, the dining table commands attention. In hospitality areas, the solid wood creates a refined ambience, while the version with a quartz table top represents both lightness and an exciting combination of materials.
